

Petra Custom Builders was born out of a vision to redefine construction as being a relational and interactive business as opposed to the transactional industry it had become. We recognized that the service provided had lost the personal touch and value-add of building a collaborative partnership with a homeowner before construction begins. That's why we embarked on our journey, finding like-minded people who shared our values and wanted to be a part of something that's sum was much greater than any of us as individuals. We continually avoid the temptation to grow merely because the ever-growing market in Boulder County can support it with readily available work. Instead, we intentionally take a slower approach, allowing our small firm to grow organically into a team with a shared mission: To provide the best customer service and experience possible. We maintain a clear and concise trajectory toward our core value; we are members of the service industry and the exceptional product our homeowners take away from working with us is merely the result of outstanding service, established through open communication and the management of expectations from start to finish. We are only satisfied when we have created the best possible product we can with the resources we have available.
